Joy and Celebration: A Foreword

By Andrew W.K.

For those already familiar with me, “Hello.” For those unfamiliar with me, “You’re now already more familiar with me than you had been prior to picking up this book and beginning to read this introduction.” I’ve recorded several songs you may have heard, including, “Party Hard,” “We Want Fun,” and “It’s Time To Party.” I now want to ask you, “What does the word ‘party’ mean to you?” What it means to you may differ from what it means to me, and what it means to me may differ from what it means to someone else. Some may define the word “party” as a basic celebration. But what is the meaning of celebration? To some, it may mean drinking alcohol, consuming drugs, or spending time with friends. To others, celebration may mean engaging in any activity that provides joy and happiness. Some may say celebration means a grateful appreciation of life in general — a delight in the opportunity we have to be alive, and an expression of that delight in every moment of our day-to-day existence. I’ve preferred to leave my own definitions of “party” and “celebration” wide open, so that my understandings can grow and develop as much as possible. In the most basic sense, I’ve chosen to create music and art that reflect and create what I would call “physical and mental joy.” With this, I hope to create enjoyable moments for myself and those around me, and to me, this type of joy has best been expressed through the word “party,” which is direct and clear, but also open enough to allow as many people as possible the room to celebrate with me.

Now, someone may be saying, “Joy and celebration? What are those words doing in a book about Heavy Metal?” And some others may be saying, “What is Andrew W.K. doing in a book about Heavy Metal in the first place?” Here again, I’d like to point out that different people will have different understandings and ideas about what defines joy, and even what defines Heavy Metal. Aye Jay (the creator of this book) decided that it made perfect sense to have me in the book. That’s why I was very honored and thankful when he asked if I would write this introduction. I was thrilled that he considered me part of this style of music he clearly loves, even if I had never considered myself to be a part of it. But again, what Aye Jay thinks of as “Heavy Metal” music may be very different from my own idea of it, and possibly different from yours as well. Just as every snowflake is unique, everyone’s ideas about certain styles of music are as unique as imagination allows. Sure, it could be said that “Heavy Metal” means a certain sonic presentation, like, for example, distorted electric guitar. But does that mean all music featuring distorted guitar is “Heavy Metal”? Some may say yes and others no, and people may have different standards by which they classify music that go beyond the instruments used. Remember that the primary experience of listening to the music is that rush of excitement and good feelings we crave. Our ability to classify that experience, and label it as being “Heavy Metal” or “Rock” or “Good Music” or “Bad Music” is just a way for us to understand and make sense of an otherwise almost overwhelming amount of sensory information. I think it’s okay to organize and label music, but I try to remember that these ideas are just labels, and not the music itself. Otherwise, we could satisfy our appetites by eating food descriptions and packaging, rather than consuming the flavors and nutrients found inside the food. The labels are our way of keeping track of a sensation, so that we may find it, or avoid it, more easily. Through this organization and preference, we’re each able to decide on how a certain song or piece of music affects us, and most likely will continue to affect us, and then place it in a certain area of our own minds. This is the development of one’s “taste.” From that personalized taste, we’re able to make preconceived choices about “what is what” and whether we like it or not. At the same time, it’s my belief that a never-ending effort to appreciate ALL kinds of things, even what we decide we don’t like, ultimately empowers us by adding to our lives, rather than taking away from our experiences and limiting ourselves. Without the vastness of all the different kinds of ideas and music, including what we “don’t like,” we wouldn’t be able to form our own tastes in the first place, and pick and choose from all the world has to offer. Ultimately, understanding this can allow everyone to feel good by indulging in what we each love, and focusing on that love, rather than what feels bad and hateful.

In my opinion, true beauty is found in those vast differences, and in the undeniable similarities we experience with people, places, and things. With our actions and choices, we’re giving genuine energy to our own ideas, and this energy either brings us together, or sets us apart. This energy is a surging and constant force — it’s the same force that motivated Aye Jay to listen to the music that made him feel good, and the same force that helped him decide what he thinks “Heavy Metal” is, and make this book. Then, the energy from his actions created more of the same force, which in turn brought me in to write these words, and the same force compelling you to read them. I urge us all to embrace words like “energy,” “force,” and other ideas which may seem light and sentimental, and set aside our fears of being “unrealistic” or naive in believing in their power. For it is these illusive qualities and forces that we must hold onto tightest of all, and value for the mystery and wonder they inspire. It is these forces that give us goose bumps when a favorite riff starts on a song, and it is these forces that drive us to find more of those goose bumps. The energy in Heavy Metal music (whatever Heavy Metal music is) is the same energy that makes us tap our feet to drum beats, or bang our heads, or play instruments, or go to concerts, or look at books. Let us all develop and cherish our love for this energy, and let us realize that it’s this energy — this force — that defines our love of Heavy Metal, and all of the great loves of our collective life.

PARTY HARD!
Love, Andrew W.K.

"AT LAST, AN ACTIVITY BOOK
FOR METAL HEADS. FROM SLIPKNOT TO SPINAL TAP,
THE BRAIN TEASERS ARE ALL THERE.
USE SOME MAGIC AND THE ANSWERS ARE SURE TO COME."

— RONNIE JAMES DIO —

"METAL DOESN'T ALWAYS HAVE TO BE MURDER,
BLACKNESS AND HATRED. SOMETIMES IT CAN BE ABOUT MIND PUZZLES, GAMES ABOUT MURDER, BLACKNESS, AND HATRED."

— BRENDON SMALL —

"THE ENERGY IN HEAVY METAL MUSIC
(WHATEVER HEAVY METAL MUSIC IS) IS THE
SAME ENERGY THAT MAKES US TAP OUR FEET
TO DRUM BEATS, OR BANG OUR HEADS,
OR PLAY INSTRUMENTS, OR GO TO CONCERTS,
OR LOOK AT BOOKS."
